SENATOR JANSSEN: What would stop them from refusing?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Yes.

SENATOR JANSSEN: Well, most of the time they need personnel. They don't care.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: How do you know that?

SENATOR JANSSEN: Because there are fewer and fewer people that want to provide that public service in the rural areas.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Janssen, do you think this bill is very, very important or just somewhat important?

SENATOR JANSSEN: Senator, Senator Chambers, yes, I do.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do you think it's the highest priority?

SENATOR JANSSEN: Well, it wasn't as high as a bill I have prioritized, but, yes, I would say it would be my second choice.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Which bill did you high...which bill did you prioritize? What does it do?

SENATOR JANSSEN: Child day-care.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So then day-cares are more important than life-saving activities?

SENATOR JANSSEN: Well, I believe that maybe some lives can be saved with the bill that I prioritized, too, Senator, hopefully, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: If this bill does not pass, which of us would be responsible for that person dying, if one died, I, who talked about the bill today, or, you, who didn't think it was high enough of a priority to make it number one in your agenda?

SENATOR JANSSEN: Well, I would imagine we both would probably in that big picture, Senator Chambers.
